

Storm Eleanor leaves 200,000 households in northern France without power -January 3, 2018

Storm Eleanor leaves 200 000 households in northern France without power. At the same time, the Eiffel Tower, one of the city's most important symbols, was closed to visitors due to the speed of the wind reaching 140 kilometers in Paris. A few days ago in France, due to an effective "Carmen" storm, 65,000 homes were unable to receive electricity, and one person lost his life.
